Our Subsidiary in Singapore Attained ISO13485 Certification

We hereby announce that one of our wholly-owned subsidiary companies, Sumitomo Warehouse (Singapore) Pte Ltd (hereinafter called “SWS”) attained the certification of ISO13485, the international standards on quality management system for medical devices.

ISO13485, having its basis on the quality management according to ISO9001, is to certify that a company satisfies the prescribed standards for respective processes of development, manufacturing, distribution, installation and sale etc. of medical devices for securing the product safety.

Companies dealing medical devices in Singapore are required to have ISO13485 certification or the other certification published by Singapore Health and Science Authority, and therefore the logistics providers for such dealers are also expected to provide the services according to the standards at the similar level.

Singapore is gathering many medical technology companies and now SWS got prepared for providing them with logistics services with higher safety by attaining ISO13485 on warehousing and distribution services. SWS will endeavour to expand its businesses by taking in the logistics demands for medical devices in Singapore.
