Our Subsidiary in Singapore Attained Certifications of OHSAS18001 & bizSAFE (Level Star)

One of our wholly owned subsidiaries in Singapore, Sumitomo Warehouse (Singapore) Pte. Ltd. (“SWS”), attained certifications of OHSAS18001:2007, the international standards for management of occupational health and safety (“OHS”) and bizSAFE (Level Star), the highest-grade certification of OHS standards in Singapore.

OHSAS18001:2007 are the international standards which were established in 1999 (revised in 2007) by a consortium of many organisations composed of British Standards Institution, Japanese Standards Association and independent certifying organisations etc. on the basis of BS8800 (the standards for OHS management system established by British Standards Institution). It provides for the scheme of identifying the risks relating to health and safety for the employees, drafting and implementing the measures against such risks, and regular audits and reviewing the management system.

bizSAFE is the government-led system in Singapore to grade the business entities satisfying specific standards for OHS according to five levels. SWS was graded as Level 4 in December 2011 but it kept endeavouring to improve its OHS level and finally attained the highest level (Level Star).

SWS is an international logistics service provider engaged mainly in warehousing, transportation and freight forwarding services in Singapore. It has already attained certifications of ISO9001 and ISO14001, and will pay still more attention to not only service quality but environmental load and OHS in its operations through such management systems.
